The battle is held here to confirm the Chinese report that only four of the larger Russian warships were at Port Arthur last night.

A party of Russians and Chinese arrived here to-day by junk direct from Port Arthur, having left there yesterday. They report that for several days shells from both land and sea have been falling in the town, but doing

It is difficult to obtain correct information in regard to the condition of the fleet. The Russians maintain that it is intact, with the exception of the battle-ship Sevastopol, which is being repaired.

After several fruitless assaults on Guin-San-Shan the Japanese commander sent a strong column along the central road from Dainy to Port Arthur, with the object of turning the Russian left, forcing the Russians to retire.

The Russians lost seven officers and nearly two hundred men killed. The Japanese losses are believed to be much larger, as during the battle they passed over a mine which the Russians successfully exploded.
